

Please do not interfere with the Indiana telephone privacy law. I am of the opinion that all business solicitation calls are unconstitutional in the first place in that they constitute a "taking" of private property. My reasoning is that I have paid for the use of my "private" line. It is to be used only by those that I have a personal relationship with, not to contribute to someone's business. I would like to take all of the solicitation calls to small claims court and sue for those minutes of use by businesses on my "private=personal" line.
